Instructions

These first two should be self-explanatory.
The actual card for the character and a Bloodied card. There's room to write in in character names on both sides and places
to jot down defenses

AC: Fort:
Ref: Will:
Example Name

My experience is that, apart from bloodied, most combat encounters rarely throw more than 5 status effects at the combatants. So this system has worked out pretty well for me. The gray lines at the top and bottom of each card show you how much room you have to write in text. Numbers are to help you keep track of which size card is which.

Included in this PDF are 10 of each size card, as well as an "arrow" card for showing whose turn it is. Just print the next 4 pages on cardstock, cut along the black lines, fold 'em in half, and write in your names and statuses. If you keep your text within the boxes created by the gray lines, everything should stay visible. Happy Gaming!

(This is the number 5 size status card. I left the number off so you can use the entire available area for text.)
