FANTASY HANDOUTS MENUS

by Philip Reed

The three pages that follow each present a single menu that you can use for any tavern or inn in your campaign. Each menu offers a slightly different selection of foods (and prices) . . . just like in the real world. These menus can either be used as presented or as the inspiration for menus of your own creation.

While presented in color, these menus can easily be printed in black & white by simply selecting the grayscale option in your print monitor.

The material in this PDF is systemless, meaning that it can be used with almost any fantasy roleplaying game.

MENUS 2

BY MICHAEL HAMMES

The three pages that follow each present a single menu suitable for use in your campaign. Although each menu can be used for just about any pub, tavern, inn, and other such establishment in your campaign, the design and foods work best in the following ways:

MENU 1

The quill design suggests a place of literacy. The establishment to which this menu belongs would most appropriately be located near a university, library, or other place of learning, near a center of government, or where there are lots of wizards. Remember that medieval establishments are very local (i.e. neighborhood or street) in their clientele; bards, sages, scribes, clerks, wizards and anyone else who makes their living with writing would be likely visitors. The menu itself is fairly basic suggesting that the establishment caters to low-level professionals and starving students rather than master wizards or high government officials.

MENU 2

The intertwined design of the side borders suggests a forest or at least outdoors motif. The establishment to which this menu belongs would most appropriately be located out in the countryside, far from a big city, and in or near a larger wood; a village inn or a way station would be very appropriate. The menu is heavily focused on things readily available out in the country and forest along with some basics from the nearby village and the proprietor's personal garden

MENU 3

This is a banquet or lavish dinner menu; it is appropriate for both an official banquet (i.e. the Baron's Holiday Ball, the Mayor's Reception, the Wizards Guild Annual, etc.) as well as for an exclusive (read: fancy) establishment (if you have to ask about the price, you can't afford it). You may wish to personalize it with the crest of the individual/organization hosting the banquet.

While presented in color, these menus can easily be printed in black & white by simply selecting the grayscale option in your print monitor.

PARDONS

BY PHILIP REED

FANTASY HANDOUTS PARDONS

by Philip Reed

Inside this release in the Fantasy Handouts series you will find three pardons, documents that absolve the bearer of any prior crime. As with many such documents, their true value is in the fact that they do not bear the name of any individual so that anyone in possession of one of these documents may attempt to pass himself off as the rightful owner.

The first pardon is especially valuable since it is a palimpsest. A palimpsest is a document created from a prior document that has been washed and most of the writing scraped off. What, exactly, the faint writings under the pardon say is left to the imagination of the GM. The prior document could have been a love letter, a merchant's inventory list, or even a magical secret.

The last pardon is written in a wizard's script. For those characters that may read such text, a translation has been included.

While presented in color, these menus can easily be printed in black & white by simply selecting the grayscale option in your print monitor.

The material in this PDF is systemless, meaning that it can be used with almost any fantasy roleplaying game.

On this seventh day of the year of flowers,

Be it hereby known that the bearer of this paper is absolved and pardoned of all crimes against king and country. As granted by my rightful and respected place as the king's chosen jailer and executioner, the king has decreed that this poor soul is innocent and free to continue his life.

Furthermore, any who so harms or hinders the bearer of this paper for past misdeeds shall be subject to the king's punishment. Failure to honor and respect the king's commands is punishable by hanging.

The king's seal, below, makes this paper binding law that must be followed by all subjects of the king.

The entire page is enclosed in a decorative border. The border consists of multiple parallel lines, with the innermost and outermost lines being simple lines, and the middle lines featuring repeating geometric patterns. The corners of the border are decorated with stylized floral motifs. Inside the border, there are large, symmetrical leafy branches extending upwards from the bottom corners and downwards from the top corners, framing a central archway. The archway is defined by a double-line border with a repeating pattern. The text is centered within this archway.

RANSOM NOTES

BY MICHAEL HAMMES

The pages that follow each present a ransom note for use in your campaign designed as a springboard for a single adventure or a mini-campaign.

For your convenience the entire text of each ransom note is editable so that you may change as little or as much of the details as necessary to fit your game.

Chivalrous Ransom Note

It was not unknown for individuals taken prisoner in the Middle Ages (at least knights and nobles) to be allowed to ransom themselves. In fact, the root of “ransom” is the Latin redemptio = “buying back.” The most famous medieval ransom may be the ransom of King Richard I of England from Duke Leopold V of Austria. This ransom note plays on that as the individual being held for ransom is considered a “guest” and, especially if it is a commonly accepted custom, the individual holding the “guest” may not necessarily be evil (in fact, a Lawful Good paladin would think it a duty to ransom an enemy captured in battle rather than simply killing him).

Misspelled Ransom Note

This ransom note suggests amateur and uneducated thugs and is appropriate for everything from low-level rogues to opportunistic bandits to humanoids. Whether the included finger is actually the ransomed individual's or not is open to debate.

NOTE: As an added touch of humor when you print this page write a larger amount over the amount included.

Polite Yet Cruel Ransom Note

Instead of straight cash, this ransom note demands a specific item in the heroes' possession. This item should be one the heroes fought hard to obtain, preferably against efforts by the undersigned and her henchmen (especially Childean Hammersmith) to do likewise.

Ambitious Ransom Note

Anyone can hold an individual for ransom, but an entire village? Why not? Of course the villagers can't (or won't) pay and so the heroes have to come to the rescue.

Concise Ransom Note

This ransom note is most likely targeted at a wealthy individual (i.e. merchant, noble, official, etc.). The heroes may be hired by the individual or may somehow intercept the note and decide to become involved.

Task Ransom Note

Rather than giving up money, the heroes (or someone else) must perform a specific task in order to win the release of the hostages, in this case bringing back a prince who was forced into exile due to the heroes' actions.

Product review and feedback by Mark Gedak

The six pages that follow each present a single wanted poster that the gamemaster can print and use, either as the starting point for an adventure or simply as background flavor to help add depth to his campaign.

UPDATE: You can now edit the reward values in this PDF. Simply select the price and change it to suit your needs. Please note that you will not be able to save your changes unless you own a full PDF editing program, but you will be able to print your changed poster.

While presented in color, these wanted posters can easily be printed in black & white by simply selecting the grayscale option in your print monitor.

The material in this PDF is systemless, meaning that it can be used with almost any fantasy roleplaying game.

FANTASY HANDOUTS

WANTED POSTERS 3

BY PHILIP REED

FANTASY HANDOUTS WANTED POSTERS 3

by Philip Reed

The six pages that follow each present a single wanted poster that the gamemaster can print and use, either as the starting point for an adventure or simply as background flavor to help add depth to his campaign.

UPDATE: You can now edit the reward values in this PDF. Simply select the price and change it to suit your needs. Please note that you will not be able to save your changes unless you own a full PDF editing program, but you will be able to print your changed poster.

While presented in color, these wanted posters can easily be printed in black & white by simply selecting the grayscale option in your print monitor.

The material in this PDF is systemless, meaning that it can be used with almost any fantasy roleplaying game.
